Problem-solving is the act of defining a problem; determining the cause of the problem; identifying, prioritizing, and selecting alternatives for a solution; and implementing a solution. The problem-solving process. The act of thinking critically and being able to produce a solution has a lot of steps to it. Consensus decision-making offers a way to include everyone in finding a solution or answer that serves the entire group. It helps create a sense of ownership in both the process and the result. If you have ever served on a jury, this is the process used in deliberation to reach a verdict. It takes time, effort, and commitment to make the process work. In making ethical decisions, it is necessary to perceive and eliminate unethical options and select the best ethical alternative. Ethical decisions generate and sustain trust; demonstrate respect, responsibility, fairness and caring; and are consistent with good citizenship. These behaviours provide a foundation for making better decisions by setting the ground rules for our behaviour For example, a manager taking responsibility for his team not making a deadline because of his lack of oversight is ethical behaviour.
